

Contributors to this issue

NAKANO Sachiko

Researcher, NHK Broadcasting Culture Research Institute. Joining NHK in 1992, she first served in the Sendai regional headquarters. In 1994 she moved to the Institute and has since been engaged in audience surveys at the Public Opinion Research Division. She has been involved in the NHK National Time Use Survey since 2000.

OKAMOTO Takashi

Editor of NHK Broadcasting Studies and director of the Media and Management Research Division, NHK Broadcasting Culture Research Institute. Joining NHK in 1971, he was a reporter of political and international news and foreign correspondent based in Teheran, Jakarta, Sydney, and Bangkok.

ONODERA Noriko

Senior researcher, NHK Broadcasting Culture Research Institute. Since joining NHK in 1980, she has been involved in research at the Public Opinion Research Division mainly on sampling and survey methods. She has been conducting Japanese surveys for the International Social Survey Programme (ISSP) since 1995.

SONE Toshiro

Senior researcher, NHK Broadcasting Culture Research Institute. Joining NHK in 1966, he was foreign correspondent in Paris and Sydney, and Senior Officer of Sports of the Asia Pacific Broadcasting Union based in Kuala Lumpur. He was involved in the production of the international signal for the 1988 and 1998 Olympic Games and the 1990 Asian Games.

TAMBINI, Damian

A specialist in the media and telecommunications policy and democratic communication, he was appointed Head of the Programme in Comparative Media Law and Policy at the Centre for Socio-Legal Studies, Oxford University in June 2002 and is Senior Research Fellow at the Institute for Public Policy Research (IPPR) and Research Associate at the London School of Economics. He is coeditor of New News: Impartial Broadcasting in the Digital Age (IPPR 2002) and author of Privacy and the Media (IPPR, December 2003).

YOKOYAMA Shigeru

Senior researcher, NHK Broadcasting Culture Research Institute. Joining the Institute as a researcher after working as program director for six years, he conducted numerous survey studies, and served as editor of Studies of Broadcasting (1995–1999). He is coauthor of Terebi shicho no gojunen [History and Analysis of TV Watching and TV Programming in Japan], Nippon Hoso Shuppan Kyokai, 2002.

YONEKURA RITSU

Researcher, NHK Broadcasting Culture Research Institute. Upon joining NHK in 1994 he was appointed to the regional headquarters in Hiroshima, and in 1998 he became involved in production of news programs and documentaries in the News Department at NHK's Tokyo headquarters. In 2001 he joined the Institute and has since been engaged in public surveys and research on journalism

* * *

Editorial note: Japanese names in NHK Broadcasting Studies are given in the customary surname-first order.